

Joy Anthony
Work Ready Job Seeker Success

While working part-time and pursuing a graphic design education, Joy Anthony dreamed of being accepted in Quad/Graphics competitive corporate training program. The application process is both rigorous and highly competitive, and Joy jumped at the chance to gain a competitive advantage.

The company, headquartered in Wisconsin, is the world's largest privately held printing company and has a print production site in The Rock, Ga. Its intensive training program enables select individuals to spend 18 months to three years rotating through both manufacturing and administrative departments to learn the business from the ground up.

During the rigorous interview process, Joy heard a radio ad for Work Ready. She knew that the company preferred Work Ready Certified candidates, so she contacted Griffin Technical College to learn more.

She completed the assessment and earned a Platinum Work Ready Certificate. She showcased her score to her potential employer and was admitted to the training program.

Joy believes her Work Ready Certificate gave her the proof she needed to gain acceptance. "I had been talking about my skills, but the Work Ready Certificate proved it. The certificate gave me the edge I needed."
